Even more surprising, his song is quickly climbing into the iTunes charts. Right now he is in #67, in front of songs by artists such as Kendrick Lamar, Kesha, Selena Gomez, The Chainsmokers and a number of other popular and established artists. (It's worth noting that Rezhami's silent song isn't the first to gain notoriety, though I don't think John Cage's composition has ever run up the iTunes charts.) NOT ALL HEROES WEAR CAPES ellie: (@_elliebean) August 9, 2017 The question now is whether apple will remove the track from the iTunes Store. On the one hand, it is clearly a joke, but on the other Apple benefits from every sale. Sure, Mezrahi also laughs at his way to the bank, but you can't a man to have a good idea. Many will surely intire that this hack could be done by manually doing your empty song and adding it to your phone, but the convenience of spending 99 cents on this to get the problem going is a trade-off that seems worth it. If you're an Apple Music user, we have even better news for you: you can simply add the song to your library there as part of your subscription. But it might be more fun to pay the dollar and see if the world can get an empty track of silence at the top of the iTunes charts. Correction: This article originally misspelled Mezrahi's last name. We apologize for the mistake.
